1. This Office action is in response to the Request for Reconsideration filed November 3, 2008. Claims 1-11 are pending. Applicant's remarks have been carefully considered, but are not persuasive. Thus, the prior rejections have been repeated below. Also, see Examiner's reasoning below.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000. Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

3. Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Hayes et al (6,223,348).

Regarding claim 1, Figure 1 shows the claimed remote control with a plurality of keypads arranged in groupings based on functionality. The navigation keys have a pie shape; the number entry keys have a number shape; the device select keys have a round shape. These groups are merely exemplary and should not be construed to constitute the only groups shown. The claimed grouping of navigation keys that are centrally located are shown as the select keys.

Regarding claim 2, Figure 1 shows at least groupings for navigation keys, a grouping for number keys, and a group for a power key.

Regarding claim 3, see spacing between numbers keys and volume keys.

Regarding claims 4 and 5, see shape of number keys and volume keys.

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 6-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hayes et al.

Regarding claim 6, this claim is essentially the same as claim 1 with the inclusion of at least one remotely controllable appliance. While, Hayes does not show the remotely controlled appliance, it would have been obvious to include such an item in a system since that is the purpose of the remote control unit. The items are designed to have utility when used together.

Regarding claims 7-10, these limitations have been addressed in prior claims.

Regarding claim 11, see keys around item 11 in Figure 1.

Response to Remarks

6. Applicant argues that Hayes fails to teach or make obvious the claimed invention. Namely: a universal remote control wherein "all groupings in the plurality of groupings has a different shape, wherein the shape and location of the keypads in each grouping enable a user to operate the universal remote control." As applicant is aware, the use of comprising language means that additional non-recited elements may be included. Therefore, it is not necessary for every key in Hayes to be part of a grouping wherein the keys of the groups have a different shape from keys in another group. All that is required are two groups of keys wherein the keys of each group have a similar shape and are different from the shapes of another group. This is clearly shown in Hayes. First, the remote control in Hayes is a universal remote as indicated by the title. Second, the keys for entering numbers are shaped like numbers. This is considered one group. The keys for navigations, as shown in the center of the remote control, are shaped like triangles. This is considered a second group. Finally, the round keys at the top of the remote control are for device selection. These may be considered to be a further group. Additional groups may be found by considering similar shaped keys on the remote control. As shown above, the groupings of the keys are based on the similar functions associated with the key groupings. These include, number entry, navigation, and device selection. Therefore, the claimed limitations are clearly met by the reference.

7. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
